DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 5,632,019 to Masiewicz (hereafter "Masiewicz").

Masiewicz discloses advantages to sensing a bus load variation, which includes detecting an added bus receiver on a computer system bus, by detecting the rate of voltage change on the bus in response to an injected current.

Masiewicz does not discuss adjusting a common mode voltage by the current injection, and does not mention application of the load-sensing to a PCI-Express link. Official Notice is taken that PCI-Express was a well-known kind of computer system bus at the time the invention was made. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply Masiewicz's computer bus receiver detection, with its consequent advantages, to a PCI-Express bus. Such an application would have been obvious because PCI-Express was already a well-known computer system bus. Bus current injection in such an application would modulate the bus common mode voltage.

Art Unit: 2133

Regarding claims 5 and 16, Masiewicz does not discuss CML buffers. Official Notice is taken that CML buffers were conventional bus buffers at the time the invention was made. It would have been obvious to a person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply Masiewicz's computer bus current injection by using a CML buffer. Such an application would have been obvious because CML buffers were already conventional bus buffers.
